Black Bough Poetry: Issue 2

‘lux aeterna’— ‘eternal light’

A tribute to: Apollo 11 #50years - Helen Sharman #firstBritoninspace

www.blackboughpoetry.com

Twitter: @blackboughpoems
Welcome—from Wales to the world!

Black Bough Issue 2 commemorates 50 years since the NASA moon landing in 1969 by Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin, with Michael Collins in lunar orbit. This Issue is also dedicated to Helen Sharman, the first Briton in space and a variety of other figures from Leonardo Da Vinci to Van Gogh, Henrietta Leavitt, Valentina Tereshkova, Peter Higgs and Dr Lyn Evans, that have inspired the poets.

The editorial team and I are amazed by the dazzling array of talent from across the world. When we requested submissions for space/ cosmic poems, the response was huge and it has been a challenging but exciting task to put this together. I’d like to offer a huge thanks to the Guest Readers - Lee Prosser, Laura Wainwright and Katie Stockton - for their hard work, good judgment and diligence. They were a huge asset. This Issue has been further enlivened by a mystery artist—LK-97—who sent us amazing artwork. We now know who this artist is—Elizabeth Kemball, from Stoke-on-Trent, England. Elizabeth had three poems accepted for this Issue but the talent and enthusiasm didn’t stop there. The addition of her artwork has been a revelation.

The title of Issue 2, ‘Lux aeterna / nitya jyoti’, comes from the Jess Thayil poem in the prologue. While many of the poems are grounded in time, characters and places, ‘eternal light’ transcends darkness, time and matter.

Poets have also been asked to record their work on Youtube and Soundcloud. The third Voyager golden disc will therefore be the Black Bough golden disc with ‘Sounds of the poets’. Make sure you follow Black Bough on Twitter and join a worldwide, supportive community of talented poets.

Thanks for reading,

Matthew M C Smith—Editor
19th July 2019.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Position</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Lee Prosser</td>
<td>Guest reader &amp; features</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Katie Stockton</td>
<td>Guest reader &amp; features</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Matthew M C Smith</td>
<td>Editor-in-chief</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Laura Wainwright</td>
<td>Guest reader &amp; features</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LK-97</td>
<td>Mystery artist</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Prologue - ‘lux aeterna / nitya jyoti’
(eternal light)
Lux Aeterna / nitya jyoti

in the death-churn kanti kayapushti her left hand melts fear vagdanam dwipam
the moon softens its tug the ocean relents and breaks into song shanti: shanti: shanti:

from Bhumi’s girandoles stars leap and lance the gloom. As Varaha lifts a conch to his lips vellicam: vellicam: vellicam:

Jess Thayil

Inspired by (but also stays independent of) a Hindu myth in which goddess Bhumi — the personification of earth — was rescued from the ocean by her husband Varaha, a form of Vishnu, the cosmic preserver. In some sculptures, Bhumi is depicted with her left hand in abhaya mudra (the gesture of fearlessness). Words transliterated from Malayalam: nitya jyoti – eternal light; kanti – brilliance; kayapushti – (physical) strength;
vagdanam – promise; dwipam – lamp; shanti – peace; vellicam – light

चुन्द्रमा मनसो जात: | चक्ष्योऽस्या अजायत ।

the mind is affected by Chandra in the ancient scriptures
it is the circle of life, rebirth, waxing, waning
with thoughts that ebb and flow

Surya, the sun, its rays from infinite distance our eye, consciousness, immortality.

Leela Soma

Note: Chandra- moon
Surya- Sun
(Quote from Yajur Veda 1200-1000 BCE)
I - Apollo 11 #50 years Small
you buzz you kneel
you slip into the black vast gape then gasp
at the craft that carried you and your flag
through a silent sea
so beautiful so desolate,
so giant you leap

K Weber

Mother

Moonchild,
I longed to visit her.
Jealous of these men:
Their footprints in her cool dust.
I had to smooth her
And soothe her
And make the crescent faultless,
For grey-eyed Selene, again.

Ann Marie Foster
Temporal Law

After Apollo 9

Years spring past us, but we feel no seasons: time is our only winter.
Your presence comes first at twilight and then at dawn—black holes formed in Artemis’ name, an outline of cosmos that spell the name of the golden sun.
Escape into the darkness comes just as naturally, landing offers unease—
we fly until we throttle into disorder, handmade. Winter only offers unrest.

Preston Smith

Blast Off

Believing we can obtain life beyond the sky
Finally, freely, take flight
Unfettered, soar to specks of light

Lilia Cosavalente

Separation

1969 is as old as the moon, when veneered cathodes with cornered petulance sparked in sitting rooms,
when we saw those bleached and unearthy loping figures,
who mattered less than earlier pictures when colour caught the rocket’s staging: a flaring ring flung back against the planet’s wide, dumbfounded face.
A single gesture yes, but broadcast live,
we shared the heat of this unbridling.

Julian Cason

The other one

There are blinded grotesques in the Hieronymous deep who push on in faith, oblivious.
Two kicked at sand, planted flags and shielded eyes
from the networks’ glare,
while the third drifted unremembered.
And when his raft of tin sank behind the moon
everything was occluded:
a Lazarus, impatient to surface
and rebreathe the light.

Polly Oliver

Watchers

A frequency: Pin-cold,
Pierces light years,
Probes the vacuum – Blind finger extending Into the butterfly-wing blue Haze of atmosphere
In the spaces
Between brain-folds Atoms shift.
Uneasy in their darkness, Receiving.

Polly Oliver
Apollo 11, An Anniversary: Three poems.

I

'Beauteous the moon full on the lawn;
And beauteous, when the veil's withdrawn' - Christopher Smart

moon’s turmoil in the axis of a rose-stem flying into nothing you hold your breath
like a swimmer siphoned into darkness

Southwest of Tranquility, the touch-down surface:
rocks, anomalies and debris;
behind you: fifty years, a world of screens flickering blue and waiting.

II

it’s all laid out like yesterday the prospect to the promontory of Kant Plateau:
where the module’s shadow cuts across in high res shots
the bounding promenade,
our first steps in protective suits
and time is vertigo in space, we flail in reaching outwards whirling specks of dust.

III

perhaps, though we don’t always seem very much or seem to see in camera arrays that we have made, we sometimes see ourselves coming towards us and going away in spaces
so utterly different from those out there, in ways we only half-forget, a dream to the dreamless;
there are no powerful rockets to take us only something glimpsed once back in the desert of caves we turn to with dawning thought of ochre, of beads and bones stained red.

David Anwn

Conviction

I believe you went to the moon and back, praying as you rattled
through the dark,

felt you moving over us,
a twinkle in the sky,
worthing what though art.

Experience

At the turn into adult
I lay on red clay,
the rains had passed.

I saw my first one,
two, three shooting stars…
like waiting for a bus.

Still, I cling on to the ride,
a comet that’s all mine.

Kate North

Observation

After Adorno

I see it in the descending seed, it’s whirl wide as the schema of ashen rock riding
our tide in time;
watching the stars
down to Earth.
The Dark Side of the Moon

Looking up into the sky at night I see a familiar sight:
the big round lunar satellite with an asteroid pock-scarred face.
The name for your face belonged to a deceased, monocled astronomer who informed me as a child about solar flares, black holes, gas giants and the rings of Saturn.

When he died he became the man in the moon.
The moon which he mapped and telescope scoured.

When he died, asteroid 2012 XE54 passed close to our planet, a distant star turned supernova. A nebulous dusty cloud stretched lazily across space and a bright-tailed meteor hurtled onwards—past the dark side of the moon.

Ghosts

Gazed flickering stars.
Glitter-filled eyes lighting up in this scattered space.
The burnt-out stars leave a trace
as shadows in this distance.

Lee Prosser

Manoeuvre

Eagle of the Sun-God falls on Tranquillity stands footpads first in front of our TV

a carpet’s diamond
for its base. Count

down to departure
beyond child’s grip

till its return here plying lunar dust

Tim Youngs

Hanging

The harsh light a cold burn, blinding, and flashed, reflecting off the visor
the end of the path foreshadowed just as it began: airless, hope shattered desiccated, exposed, or buried beneath dust made from rocks shattered.

And after, after the end of the affair and after the end of the end of hostilities, even we left behind what we left behind and we can dream of finding old things anew because the moon forever hangs, as we do

Antonio Fusco.
Moon, Landing 20th July 1969

I was moon-hungry, ten years old,
So I set a mirror on the beach
And lay in wait that night.
Moon landed there, looked up
And was a child! Like me, an only child,
Tentative and curious, hoping to play.
To have him as my friend, I saw I’d have to let him go
And come at will. Chastened, I prayed
That all the astronauts would lose their appetites.

Angela Graham

---

Communion

Buzz Aldrin performed Christian communion while waiting for his historical walk on the moon. It wasn't highly publicized by NASA because they were afraid of the criticism it might generate.

Silent and cold among rocks,
the secret to life:
everything turns to dust,
even on the moon.

Safe inside lunar lander:
wine sipped from silver chalice,
bread broken purposely, prayer spoken.

Richard LeDue

---

Moon Landing

On that warm July night,
my father watched moonstruck
as Neil Armstrong took his giant leap.

I remained firmly earthbound,
watching our new puppies in the TV screen light,
their small black and white bodies tumbling,
stepping hesitantly into their futures.

Now--ensorcelled by moon-glow--
I plummet back, landing my time-rocket on the rocky surface of memory.

Merril D. Smith
One line

Speaking to Houston in clipped Midwestern phrases
he kept a tight-coiled line of poetry under his tongue, the same he’d carried through engagement, marriage,
the birth of his children,
waiting to be uttered
to an airless moon and watching world.

Magnificent desolation

Desolate, he rallied,
this eldest son
in the role of second man.
If his words aren’t the ones
we all know, the prints
of his boots will outlast mountains, in that fine grey dust where no foot has been since,
that desolate magnificence.

One art

Their mission patch
was his design, but as the bald eagle swoops down on the Sea of Tranquility olive branch in claw, who thinks of the essential artist, pilot of the ark, about to slip away from the glory
behind the dark side of the moon?
Later he would leave his Everglades and fighter jets unsigned fearing they would be valued beyond their merit.

Thomas Tyrrell

Stroller at Dusk

a toddler wheeled past tree bark parked cars, red-loud sign looks up says the branches
are brushing the moon

Bill Studick

earthrise

in night we watched silicate studied the formula of sky bodies attenuate, pale:
we’re left with white points remembering was not enough
then she rose wetted our eyes

Tamsin Blaxter
Man on the Moon

I can see you, my love
From crater’s shadow stretched long
A blue and white vision
In moon’s dark day sky
Dusty, burnt with stars
My eyes tear, I brace my heels
Into the regolith
Twist off my helmet
Blood boils

David Fry

For Karen

On the Moon
Nothing but magnificent desolation
My footsteps remind me
Of all those you will never take Every step
Each impression unyielding Eternal,
A father’s love
Incandescent like the stars

Daniel Page

9 1/2 B
(Where Neil trod)

Ghost silver sphere Glowing bright.
Tides’ commander
Beyond my reach.
Distance dwarfs you
Yet amongst shadows
Man’s footprints lie.

Richard Waring

50 word transcript

We choose to go to the Moon…
Lights on, down two
And do the other things… forward,
Faint shadow… not because they are easy (…picking up some dust…) but Because they are hard; because That challenge is… contact, one We are unwilling to…
…We copy you…
…Postpone. Tranquillity Base here.

Ian Richardson
Apollo

When I was a kid, I only needed
a big cardboard box, to build a spaceship.
Neat tin-foil plates polished, engines bled, charting a course for a nearby time- rip.

There is a guy I know, who succeeded in baffling folk without any censorship with his claims that NASA had completed a similar trick with their lunar trip.

Cardboard, sand, mirrors and tin foil gilded pods. No space explorers. More craftsmanship.

John McLachlan

The sitting room mission

Jessie, Maggie and me, in home-knitted balaclavas squashed into the Tunnocks 11,
our cardboard box capsule
fully equipped with crayoned control panels.
The fine craft shuddered through the long unknown.
Steel-calm teamwork brought us a safe landing.
Over mounds and craters of icing sugar,
our avatars, Sindy, Barbie and Ken,
Slowly skipped and squawked their path to history
And planted a Saltire.

Marka Rifat

First Moon Landing

My brother, sister, and I take one small step closer to the console television, gather around as if it’s fire, cooking meat for dinner, and we’re leashed dogs, salivating for the treat.
Mom hands us a bowl of hot, buttered popcorn.
Parents, grandparents perch on the edge of couches and chairs. Brother announces he’s Neil.
I shout I’m Buzz. Girls can’t be astronauts. Can, too, I scream.
Mom shushes us. The Eagle lands. Neil walks, speaks for us all.
We don’t move, bowl of popcorn untouched in front of us.

Robin Wright

Apollo 11

the hand-me-down sofa in my aunt’s lounge grunted beneath us family – friends – neighbours - huddled together awake into the night – white pipe smoke swirled – toasts with jars of homebrew all of us children again excited/frightened by the astronomical events showing on the b & w television set the only one on the block - sucking the room towards it – buzzing/crackling - conversation dead
- a black hole -
“… far above the world” - defying gravity - three men in clouds

Alan Parry
Brother’s Moon Landing

The rest of us knelt close to the screen as Lazarus stepped out, no longer entombed.
But you ran outside with your Instamatic, priest-like you raised it to the distant moon.

I’ve looked it up: it was a crescent, waxing though in my memory it is always full – full of your belief, despite our teasing – your camera had witnessed a miracle.

Anything could happen… and then it did.
  You would have been 60 this year, had you lived.

Ellie Rees

The Flea Market

Artists painting river stones at a flea market table yield pet rocks as Apollo reaches the moon.
Mine has the moon lander.
I carry that promise of technology with me until I turn from space.

Now, washed by dust and light from other galaxies, my smooth head reflects a chemotherapy travelogue. I return to technology and drifting planets.

Michael Dickel

Black and White Baby Steps

My white-haired lover tells it in monochrome relocation by way of ka-tunk ka-tunk concrete highways
New York to New Mexico
in a Rambler station wagon heaped with small-step memories while Earth traveled to the moon
in buoyant leaps and bounds

Christine Owens

One small step

There is a crater in my foot, stars are spinning around my bed;
new orbits are but one small step away.

But while a man walks on the moon, I am confined, cannot put one slippered foot in front of the next.

I feel the gravity of my eleven years, dream of planets beyond the ward, am giddy with the pull of the universe.

Fifty new dawns, half a century in my veins, scars are healing;
I leave footsteps in the moon dust, dock.

Pat Edwards
Giant leap

Strange to think that the first giant leap the hairless ape took was standing,
that a quirk of fate changed them.
A tree’s ripened fruit hanging like suns
and one small step.

Later
in steel capsules they went beyond this dying world
to claim a barren moon.

David Rudd Mitchell
II - Cosmic poems
(for Helen Sharman, first Briton in space)
Three Flights

Find

On the whelk stuck shelf,
hand sized, a stone.

A cold, brackish weight
haloed with pale rings

shadowed with ammonite coil and crevasse –
the troughed salt pans of a malformed moon.

Collision of the deep cosmos
this timeworn matter, wind dried on my bright palm shoaling atoms and long light.

Flight

The gasping white fall,
the gust and flap of the freed

parachute could not prepare Tereshkova

for the fire and thrust of cramped Vostok 6 rumbling, shuddering up through lit cloud

into lagoon then sea-cave blue then black and the swimming dome of earth

she orbited forty-eight times, returning and returning like the moon-sick tide to a stone.

Forward

Inspired by Helen Sharman (Astronaut)

What return now
for a stiff glove of grit from a trodden luminary

brushed dust from coin-rubbed craters
the blown powder of flags.

Juno’s weightless labour has travelled like light towards a red end: birth

sunned to rust on screed peak and roved mineral bed, the locked ice and hushed seas

of Earth’s death’s head
in our hands. Now how to set foot?

Laura Wainwright

Note:
Valentina Tereshkova was a Russian cosmonaut and the first woman to fly in space. She was launched into space on Vostok 6 on June 16, 1963. She was chosen for the space mission on the basis of her ability as an amateur parachutist.

Note:
Sharman has stated ‘we should push forward not only our individual boundaries, but also the boundaries of what humans believe is possible’. She has said ‘plans to send humans back to the moon lack ‘vision’. Asked if she supported ‘Barack Obama’s plan to send humans to Mars or Donald Trump’s policy to first return to the moon, she said Mars had to be the goal, and that the planned lunar missions of both NASA and the European Space Agency were driven by a need for short-term achievement.’ She also notes that ‘it is important to make space travel greener’. (The Guardian, April 27, 2018)
Da Bo Chi*
(Voyager 1)

Our words wander with you endlessly through the cosmos taid y nefoedd, interstellar leaving our heliosphere. Particles zip and stream as you’ll splutter into silence growing colder, further from us, the smallest blue speck in a beam of scattered light.

*Good bye (Welsh)
language of heaven (Welsh)

Telling the Bees

Tonight we’ll search the sky for Caer Gwydion, Arianrod’s pathway to heaven and for the brightest of the seven sister stars. Now the bottom of the garden feels a galaxy away, as we tread weightlessly in white suits and whisper to the honeyed hives mae ’di nynd*, turning them half circle away from the sun.

*she’s gone (Welsh)

Ness Owen

My Last Artwork

The night sky a sea of scattered lamps, blinking flotillas a lingering lucidity ancient constellations map celestial dreams

Karlo Silverio Sevilla

Waltz

The moon dons her black gown, speckled with stars. Tonight she’ll dance, a tiara of light for lovers below. Tides will splash rhythm while silhouettes spin.

Robin Wright

Islanders

inhabit the edges, bound by sky, by rock, by moon-turned sea, lives lived in the salt round that inhabits the edges, bound to nothing, journeyed days crowned in constellations, the drift of infinity inhabiting all edges, bound as sky, as rock, as moon-turned sea.

Angela T Carr

© Original Authors 2019. Black Bough Poetry
Colony 1

The terminal sun throws a golden band onto the alien grain of the table we grew and cut and joined. I chart multiplying islands of senile pigment on a clawed and fissured hand. Amber motes turn and shine and form an outline that reaches out and caresses my neck and whispers,

We were the first, we are the last.
Let those beasty rays in, my love.
I am waiting.

Philip Berry

Saltwort

Caustic in the sand where we build our fire,

and I sleep rolled in a blanket beside it,

a brand that shifts in the beach breeze,

its shadow under Alpheratz,

my mother’s star

tonight blue

as driftwood ash,

and I feel its roots in the bedrock,

the limestone that allows

Robert Minbhinnick

After gods

He wanders, drifting, after death of gods and kneels on rock at earth’s still pool, where water ripples to finger’s touch. He rises, raising eyes to starry vault, spirit soars through endless night, with ancient heavens myriad on show. He leans again at water’s blackened edge; the graven image, stream of light of stars, imprisoned, still, a liquid mirror.

Matthew M C Smith

Break water

A first of rocks strides into the surging sea under a canopy of battleship grey clouds. Broken boulders vanish and re-emerge. A road of promise lost and found to salt spray oblivion.

Phil Knight
Changeling

As ethereal as radiance, as mystifying as the Milky Way—staring backwards into time, standing in the frost-bright grass—you would teach me about stars, first precious intoxicating breath-stealer—like these far-off stars and love and unfathomable beauty, your radiant youth standing aloft in this ice-lit star-field at twelve already dwarfing me with all your maths and facts I don’t know where they all came from or when, and I am floating in this vast unexplored territory—an entire constellation of you stretching away, infinity greater than that first small spark telling me you existed in me and you gasp A shooting star

Yes I breathe You are.

Over a midnight shore

My last words to her a lie—
a dark tide lashing the broken silver line—sleet-scattered wind rattling dark glass,
a rasping gasp as she sprang into the frigid gap
after I told my mother she could leave us.

Bliss as

An upside-down rainbow lorikeet dangling from liquid amber branches
sweet plump seeds filling its sun
-warmed belly high above the wild abandoned laughter of kookaburras floating over a rippling star
-studded green sea
of breeze-bewitched trees.

Anne Casey

© Original Authors 2019. Black Bough Poetry

Broadside 14
Speed of light

in the rocket’s exhausts molecules labour for lift off chaos >birth > combustion
we reach for heavens half burnt out.

Seated, we calculate
the distance to paradise,
stir embers to requite the flirtation of these infinite light years.

Paul Robert Mullen

The Hare

She barrels through the silk night, moonlight glinting from her tail, smacking wind with whiskers like silver thread, searching for the fissure of dawn.

Mari Ellis Dunning

Space Station

In sleep, cosmic rays flash like binary, pulse on visual cortex.

City circuits spread, silent as tombs, oceans, landmass, whoels of cloud,
tropics, latitudes, spectral horizons,
storms’ green fire on arc of globe.

We travel into night, day, dark, light, terrifically lonely with ghost memories
of being and love.

Matthew M C Smith

Satis damnum

Grieving in the blue above a graveyard, skeletal face shocked pale as bone,
hers horror for the dead a distress,
she cannot turn away from the sunset of their stones; pray for their passage, weep a drop of her seas for their souls.

This is what enough loss will do to you.
What a lifetime of looking down
does to hearts that pull against the tides.

Mark Antony Owen

we are made of

cells that bind us
that glue blood, muscle, bone
our spaces within spirits
to dark webs of stars
burning worlds

Glen Wilson

we are made of

cells that bind us
that glue blood, muscle, bone
our spaces within spirits
to dark webs of stars
burning worlds

Paul Robert Mullen

we are made of

cells that bind us
that glue blood, muscle, bone
our spaces within spirits
to dark webs of stars
burning worlds

Paul Robert Mullen

we are made of

cells that bind us
that glue blood, muscle, bone
our spaces within spirits
to dark webs of stars
burning worlds

Paul Robert Mullen

we are made of

cells that bind us
that glue blood, muscle, bone
our spaces within spirits
to dark webs of stars
burning worlds

Paul Robert Mullen

we are made of

cells that bind us
that glue blood, muscle, bone
our spaces within spirits
to dark webs of stars
burning worlds

Paul Robert Mullen
Symposium

The lights of oblivion set in comet dust, streaking the skies in silver glow.
Below, the Earth yearns for her lover--
the soft and gentle moon.
Though shadowed by the radiant sun,
cold and barren from his flares,
she waxes and wanes love letters-- Morse code to her blue planet-- dreaming one day, they'll collide again.

Dorian Sinnott

Elegy for the Night

under stained glass skies
how am I not meant to feel inadequate?

I'll spend the evening
erasing stars I can’t own building supernova armies

in your constellation freckles

I will cloak myself in the stardust imprinted on half shut eyes and shroud each and every trace of the night-time that doesn’t want me

Sasha Smith

Reáltóireacht

Goideann dorachadas radharc mo shúile, sciobann domhantarraingt mo chorp leis
agus mé ag titeant go trom ar an tocht bunchaite seo.

Tugaim neamhaird ar an áit seo, dírím ar raon níos fiúntaí - mo ghealach, realtaí, réaltra agus mo chruinne, a chroíthe, is libhse a lúím síos de dheoin, lán im’dhúiseacht.

Stargazing

Darkness blinds my eyes and gravity claims my body
in one sharp landing on this worn sprung mattress.

I pay circumstance no heed, tuning in to the space above me;
my moon, stars, galaxies, my universe, my loves,
you are my bed fellows of choice. I lie wanton for you.

Joanne McCarthy
one but Leonardo was first to the moon, ravelling through space in a skull-white shuttle launched from an olive grove, impossible, his beard flying as he solved, computed, wondered, eyes fixed always upwards on the perplexing wax ball.

giant

up and on he rocketed into an inky sky starred with questions, light speed voyager, until, centuries young, he set his feet on the moon’s frown and unpicked an ancient puzzle: how the old-moon’s death mask, could live on, zombie, above the new-moon’s rib. Earthshine!

leap

no other astronaut has lived the lunar night as he has, in ghostlit seas trembling silver, still the only human to step into moon’s gloaming and see our lantern Earth, luminous, candling, a light leaping out into the universe’s unending dark.

Rae Howells
Davinci Spatial Code

An unstable pattern, unseen planets.
Words and links, a spatial sign language,
hidden, the traceable map.

Benedicta Boamah

---

Sidenote on space travel

Micrometeoroids cause concern.

The star-stuck endlessness, the uncomputable vision of unmanned space, that blind compass we call the sun:

phenomena like these cannot but overawe.
But, once in flight, we fear those bullet-grams of rock, impact’s attrition,
hostile to Apollo’s hull, as to a moon-bound man.

Michael Caines

---

Look

their gloved hands
guide the telescope away from town and its risen light help their child adjust the mount track movements
our ancients knew then yield to cold
snap lens cap back

Stars and moon

Riven black torn mind star swirlled cobalt sky crescent moon gold azure streaked spiralled star Arles east view sunrise brings uncertainty unrelieved reveals agony within

Rob Cullen

---

Pilgrim mother

Wise Penelope, no longer weaving, unravelling, nor biding time. Her craft blasting through troposphere, mesosphere, ionosphere, penetrating dark exosphere. Earthbound limits, questions of her loyalty and chastity,
like burnt-out capsules fall away into endless orbit.
Pilgrim mother, messiah, incubator of new worlds.
This time, no vigil, but the voyager into the portal of the stars

Kathryn Hope
Three Tanka Series

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Choke</th>
<th>Other</th>
<th>Rage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Peeled white skin</td>
<td>Future sight</td>
<td>The gold disc spins</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Reveals multiple, fragile layers</td>
<td>Who would want to know all of this?</td>
<td>North Star bright, Venus above</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cling of gravity</td>
<td>More than stars</td>
<td>A blushing moon</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Membrane only one cell thick</td>
<td>Anxiety born of certainty</td>
<td>Footprint of my rage, mere dust</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Re-entry by osmosis</td>
<td>Rather, blind-choice be my shield</td>
<td>In the face of so much beauty</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Eliot North

Observance

Night dances her Dance of the Dead, darkens her eyes with bold kohl; thinks I Shadow, laughs privately.

Night is bone-bare, holds out a finger for Moth to still himself – but Moth, electrified, craves only Moon.

Moon wears her Sunday best, drapes mist over an exposed shoulder, experiments with gold highlights, and is pleased.

Moon feels her own fading, becomes raggedy-fragile, shying from the brassy Sun; listens, bitterly, to birdsong.

Mercury Matters

I have no recollection of heat’s absence.
My skin cracks with it. Sometimes, I wake from sleep’s brief dreams and believe myself fleetingly temperate. Disappointment always dawns. I regret to confess, bitterness is my frequent companion. Half-consumed by the Sun, I am runtish, barren. Pock-marked with proximity, I bear the brunt, and bitterly. Stoicism is not for me. I burn, as the Gods throw another coal in the furnace.

Sarah Doyle
Creation Myth

See the Fate of a primordial pipette fulfilled.
Taut, it drips out a monastery wants wishes to be cast upon it across oceans of unknowing.

Katie Stockton

Lit

I throw the moon into my father’s fiery mouth.
Sober as milk, she eclipses his flaming throat, floods her pearl glow into his blank eyes, blanches their red threads. She cools his scorched tongue, hushes his curses, croons her ancient, tidal songs
to reach the boy in him that only she can heal.

Now, glittering with life, he spits. To cauterise the balm of all that pale loveliness, he rolls the scotch around his gums, ignites the blaze once more.

Kathryn Bevis

Stasis

Once upon a stasis of cold, bystander black, silent eyes constellationed themselves into order.

The black hole has a face

Explorers are fixed on discovering worlds, shrouded in cosmic black,
where secrets lie hidden,
and now we’ve seen its face,
its imaged eyes stare vacant through glimpses of futures, present, though undiscovered,
unreached, though reachable.

Catherine McCabe
Gravity

It is a dangerous thing to be born;
we are vulnerable, spinning deep in space.

Sometimes, before I sleep, face in pillow’s foam
I turn for breath, grip my bed frame.

imagine being suspended along the curve of Earth’s concentric layers

I am frantic at the thought of spiralling out of control, falling falling.........

Wendy Holborow

Lila

We wrote our names
in starlight;
scattered love across the sky’s black velvet.

You left me standing in silence;
a forgotten note
in night’s divine play.

Josh Rees

Magnum Opus

The Cosmos, a womb of darkness, heartbeats of perfect harmony,
dancing constellations, planets, stars.
Moon-dust magic, Magnus Opus observed.
Man births chaos, evicerates Earth,
plunders frontiers, searches for immortality.

Caroline Johnstone

Astronaut

Sealed in microgravity, floating witness to stars,
follower of forever abyss.

Sense this earth turn,
know this station’s velocity, sentry of pale blue sphere
where gravities keep perfection,
a perfection as rare as love.
Is there love beyond this orbit?
Is there love outside this world?

Matthew M C Smith
A Star for Lina*
(An Imperfect View of A Comet)
(*astronomer Caroline Herschel, 1750-1848)

Here she is, in her neat town garden, the telescope’s tube snagging on her sash. Dew seeping into her satin shoes, she wipes the angled mirrors, tilts it up, reflecting beams and so subverting time itself, she feels, as she streams the star’s brightly private glare towards her eye - her vision’s range now approaching, surely, God’s own scope.

This star
(from an Anglo-Saxon rune poem)

Tir bip tacna sum healed trywa wel wip æpelings a bip on þærylde ofr nihta genipu mæfre swiceð

This star is a sure sign: it keeps faith well with our rulers, is always journeying over night’s mists, never drifting.

Rosemary Appleton

Dew seeping into her satin shoes, she wipes the angled mirrors, tilts it up, reflecting beams and so subverting time itself, she feels, as she streams the star’s brightly private glare towards her eye - her vision’s range now approaching, surely, God’s own scope.

The path of the moon
(from an Anglo-Saxon riddle)

Ic wiht gesæþ wundorlice
lyftet leðorlice listrum gigeard

dust stœc to hrofnum deaw feel on eorþan
nibb forð gewat nœning sīþpan
weor geweost þære wihte sid

I saw a being, wondrously shining, a cup of sky, cunningly made.

Dust rose to heaven, dew fell on earth, Night went forth. No one later could plot her path.

Ic wiht gesæþ wundorlice
lyftet leðorlice listrum gigeard

This star
(from an Anglo-Saxon riddle)

Dew seeping into her satin shoes, she wipes the angled mirrors, tilts it up, reflecting beams and so subverting time itself, she feels, as she streams the star’s brightly private glare towards her eye - her vision’s range now approaching, surely, God’s own scope.

This star is a sure sign: it keeps faith well with our rulers, is always journeying over night’s mists, never drifting.

Rosemary Appleton

Dew seeping into her satin shoes, she wipes the angled mirrors, tilts it up, reflecting beams and so subverting time itself, she feels, as she streams the star’s brightly private glare towards her eye - her vision’s range now approaching, surely, God’s own scope.

Rosemary Appleton

I saw a being, wondrously shining, a cup of sky, cunningly made.

Dust rose to heaven, dew fell on earth, Night went forth. No one later could plot her path.

The path of the moon
(from an Anglo-Saxon riddle)

Ic wiht gesæþ wundorlice
lyftet leðorlice listrum gigeard

dust stœc to hrofnum deaw feel on eorþan
nibb forð gewat nœning sīþpan
weor geweost þære wihte sid

I saw a being, wondrously shining, a cup of sky, cunningly made.

Dust rose to heaven, dew fell on earth, Night went forth. No one later could plot her path.

Sagittarius A

In the spiralling mass,
a swirling dark death, a star once ablaze.

Planets, particles, light, drawn, devoured.

Nothing within its reach escapes its grasp.

Tracy Martinez

Falling

Reflected in your eye – the moon, the mass of stars, the galaxy, a hundred billion galaxies more; the beautiful infinity of universe caught, pinned upon your depthless pupil.

You blink. Within the penumbra of your careless lids I lose my entire cosmos.

Penny Blackburn

Sagittarius A

In the spiralling mass, a swirling dark death, a star once ablaze.

Planets, particles, light, drawn, devoured.

Nothing within its reach escapes its grasp.

Tracy Martinez

Falling

Reflected in your eye – the moon, the mass of stars, the galaxy, a hundred billion galaxies more; the beautiful infinity of universe caught, pinned upon your depthless pupil.

You blink. Within the penumbra of your careless lids I lose my entire cosmos.

Penny Blackburn

Woman in the moon

I am not the man in the moon she sighs teetering like a blanched melon she threatens to roll herself down to the seabed blasting silt scattering tides in every direction sudden jetstream a cool emergency her dull skull puckers they land soundlessly trekking her lip I am so bored of spacemen she confesses to Orion wincing at the jab of a flagpole the moon-boot’s thwack time for a crash landing

Natalie Ann Holborow

Woman in the moon

I am not the man in the moon she sighs teetering like a blanched melon she threatens to roll herself down to the seabed blasting silt scattering tides in every direction sudden jetstream a cool emergency her dull skull puckers they land soundlessly trekking her lip I am so bored of spacemen she confesses to Orion wincing at the jab of a flagpole the moon-boot’s thwack time for a crash landing

Natalie Ann Holborow
22 Vulpeculae

Hot evening, wisteria roaring with bees;
a raven, soaring, fixed one of us with its yellow eye.
Demon star, faint pulsing variable,
burst of rays from the cold uncharted.

Threats emerge, conceal themselves again.
But somewhere you remember.

Robert Hamilton

A firmament

Moths glitter in light
each in its frantic parabola.
Andromeda there. A flash of Canis Major. Sagittarius appears in a clatter of projectiles.
I could learn these shapes
if only there were time.

Above the city

It's cold up here, icy air filling lungs with emptiness, a taste of moonlight - stars close enough to switch off or blot with one thumb. The sky; suspended spirals of light, of dark -
I reach to touch the shapes of the universe.
The goosebumps on my skin are constellations, their own galaxies.

Luminescence

The hushed glow of city lights spills against midnight sky;
the glare from your phone screen illuminating blood-shot eyes;
an unfurling urban luminescence obscures the stars.

Elizabeth Kemball

Floor 3, Room 13

In the dark: fairy-lights, suspended as stars,
the tungsten street lamp glow,
intermittent flashes of the smoke alarm, blue lights,
streak the ceiling: an aurora borealis.
This galaxy encased in concrete and brick,
close enough to breathe in.
The dark - a universe shrunk into four walls - makes gods of us all.
The Stars My Teachers

Once in a blue earth
I could watch surf break on alien shores
without you.

No one taught these stars
to flare in synchrony, this cold to reach
your iced heart's burn.

Shared

Charles Duke left
a photo of his family
on the moon.
Their tiny faces also looked at what he once saw.

Before sun's searing day could peel and flay;
their single spot of color graced a dead gray world.

Kyla Houbolt

Shooting Star, Falling Star

We lie on our backs, you and I,
to watch the night sky.
"There's one!" you say,
"make a wish."

But starlight fills
my eyes with tears,
my mouth
with secrets.

Cosmusic

Sliver of moon – quarter-note sky song
in the key of see

Mary Harwell Sayler

sketch

walking as in a dream
black footprints on white

a cratered canvas
the landscape is sketched
I see pitted snow
on thunder moon

Frances Boyle

beneath the starlight midnight means picnic blankets laid out amongst fireflies on astral turf; it means buttered sandwiches beside waterfalls mirroring the stars.

the stars dance
in their orbital carousel, painting the skies with abstraction;

i let their silver light restore me.

Emilee Moyce
Monophobia

The emptiness of space, vast, strange, should've been brought into life by a boundless awareness more perfect than us. Yet wherever we go, in all we explore, we find only reflections of our invention.

Maxine Rose Munro

The Starry Night
_after Vincent Van Gogh_

rolling in on glistening waves
he picks you up carries your small weight a surge of indigo a splash of black towards those bright expanding spheres of light a spectral conjuring as skin and bone dissolve through smoke and mirrors into night

Rachel Carney

The Universe

Chrysalis of dust compressed embrace yourself goodbye when your nails touch the edge ready to be dust again I will catch you in the next embrace

Elise Trippett

Space Station Webcam

In my wheelchair with curtains closed I am hanging high above the earth, watching the luminous shell of cloud spin away over sapphire oceans glistening gold, all of us rolling toward the infinite black velvet.

Lucy Whitehead

An extract from ‘Bird Drawing by Charles Tunnicliffe’

For a stunned second after it struck the window the starling fanned its wings then folded and fell away, the glass rattling its casement like a brittle-boned body.

Glyn Edwards

The startled class are stilled around the sill as the bird stirs, labours off into the treeline - its dusty night-sky primaries collected on the glazing in a liminal nebulae

Glyn Edwards
Aftermath: flash from the Pleistocene blown up basalt gored plateau blood & sweat surge gift salts from the deep kiss the lip of the mammoth wound. Frazzled earth ejecta an apron unfurled sowing moon rock & maskelynite for latter-day treasures eucalyptus tamarind teak & bamboo; from the ancient bruise sweet call to golden orioles tailorbirds mongoose & chinkara once jewels to kings now nucleus to farmland & ruins of gods a thrumming galaxy of lives. And Lonar Lake nucleus of the nucleus wide & winsome always a hungry lesion whispering protests always a diamond from colossal accident –

First Sketch: Lacus Lenitatis–

one link in the necklace wider than hate & faith though you diminish neither; carry delight & winter as if they’re the same & your name is balance.

In Terra Nivium land of snows your gaze is steady & your face set higher looks to the other side: fixed on happiness
no matter how the sorrow weighs.

Jess Thayil

Notes:

Lonar Lake is a crater-lake in the Buldhana district of the state of Maharashtra in India. The lake is believed to have formed after a meteoric impact hit the Deccan Plateau during the Pleistocene, known commonly as the last Ice Age. It’s a site of interest for scientists, and in recent years, it’s enjoyed the status of a hidden-away tourist locale.

Notes:

The earth’s moon has basaltic plains on its surface that early astronomers took to be water features. Many of these plains have retained their names even after it came to be known that they were not seas, bays, lakes, etc. Lacus Lenitatis (Lake of Tenderness) is a lunar mare located in a specific region called Terra Nivium (Land of Snows) on the earth’s moon. Other ‘water bodies’ like Sinus Fidei (Bay of Faith), Lacus Odii (Lake of Hate) and Lacus Gaudii (Lake of Delight) are also situated in Terra Nivium.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Interlude</th>
<th>Landed</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Four billion miles away</td>
<td>Tranquillity is the sea after a billion years,</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>it is winter on Pluto</td>
<td>after bombardment from all sides,</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>the sun a lit cigarette</td>
<td>and after youth’s hot love has carved</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>punctuating the conversation</td>
<td>new channels in its map of the future.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>between worlds, its breath</td>
<td>The basin is dry, nothing to rock the boat,</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>frozen in the atmosphere</td>
<td>nothing to sail to or from and the moon</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>You step into the room</td>
<td>we once dreamt of lies beneath our feet.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>look from her to him</td>
<td>Was there ever water here?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>to wrap up warm</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>be home by ten.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Dom Conlon

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Gravities</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>When we were fast planets</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>orbiting the schoolyard</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>the fringes of our scarves</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>encircled us like moons</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>and sometimes we collided.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lava erupted in angry scabs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>on our scorched knees.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Our mouths were gaping seas</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>learning what tides mean.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Laurie Koensgen

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Lyra</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>She is a song.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A serenade</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>between planets,</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>carried skyward</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>on eagle’s wings.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A myth. A lyric</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>falling in spellbound</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>crystalline fragments,</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>piercing infinite darkness.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Chloe Gorman
The Man Who thought He Was An Astronaut.

Unshucked in his cloud-white pod, feigning weightlessness, suspended on the thin twist of his own imagination. Seeing solar systems mapped before his eyes, streets mirrored in the shining, black convexity of visor, worlds slipping through his force field, a mirage of stars, a memory of distant light. He watches us, sealed in our carapace of shadows, decoding the interstices of silence, the empty discharges of text and tweet and unsent emails, a ghostly stasis. He holds the earth in heavy, weighted boots, to keep him from free-fall, anchoring his soul in heat and light, the all engulfing solace of space and sky. This world, a small, blue pebble. The man who thought he was an astronaut remembers not to scream.

The Child With Mars In Her Eyes.

Her eyes, unprecedented, beyond blue, held on to the fog of galaxies, decay of heavens. No summer evenings, no fragrant seasons, she’s distant, far out in her universe, a time capsule smelling of false ancestors and broken promises.

Searching for mirrors, her visions are straw-men trembling behind walls, a bloodstain on flagstones, she’s been a child too long. The slender shadows peter out. Beneath her flaxen lashes, Mars ascends.

The Woman Who Wanted To Be An Asteroid.

Falling through the fierce, ink-black, her soul hard, bronze, unlit by other passing souls, adrift in the airless bowl, earth’s blue skin soft wrapped, a tissue of colour, love letters captive in the half-dark, the woman who wanted to be an asteroid, her territories ablaze, iron core ice-cold, plummets, watched by whole cities.

Lesley Quayle
On a cloudless night
Through the clematis arch
that leads to nowhere,
I join the silver slugs
to party on the moonlit lawn.

Deckchair, duvet, whisky mac,
my face is raised to watch
this section of the universe
that is entirely mine.

Knowing my place
I rarely think beyond the sky.
The stars and comets blaze their trails within a ceiling of my making.

But once, just once, as I drove early east, I found my scale as sun-rise showed itself as earth-fall.

Faint hymns
(After William Shakespeare)

We’ve shared a hundred years between us, tracing pale familiar patterns for too long.

Last night we found remembered worlds,
reached out and brushed the sky.
We summoned stars, uniting miles of endless space and felt the planet judder.

We cling like shadows to the surface,
chant faint hymns to the fruitless moon.

On a cloudless night
Through the clematis arch
that leads to nowhere,
I join the silver slugs
to party on the moonlit lawn.

Deckchair, duvet, whisky mac,
my face is raised to watch
this section of the universe
that is entirely mine.

Kathy Gee
Landing mass

She harvests planets, ticks them off with her telescope, not for her the subtlety of stamp-collecting,
the chink of coins from other lands.

Instead she prefers the golden sheen of Venus, the red sister rose of Mars.

Some nights she leaves her observatory,
takes a stroll in the friendship of stars.

Remembers those that have also walked,
the Moon a silver locket, holding secrets close.

Lynn Valentine

---

Constellations

of uniquely-spaced, silvery stars burn hydrogen through aeons
to illuminate the depths of space
and time, even though each light is finite. Behold the most beautiful self-sacrifice
in the universe.

Michael Leach
Wishing on a Near Earth Object

icy body
fresh veins of frozen material. Virgin ice slips away from the Oort Cloud, a singular blur of white across night dust tail constellations on her skin a minuscule iridescent stream plummeting further blisters, burning, browning, barely fading towards the pinprick of light one ought not fly too close to

Iona Murphy

Waxing Gibbous at 3pm

His gaze burns my shoulder.
This wink-eyed stranger Follows close like a sun blanched Shadow—colorless face Unnerves in daytime— The ghost of last night.

Copper Moon

Suspended by unseen wire
An inch above the horizon. Tintured a copper tone Through an atmospheric filter. A penny in the sky God dropped and promptly forgot.

Waning Crescent

Metallic shard cast off by the Celestial smith—platinum Shaved to wicked points. Catch, cut deep the midnight Velvet expanse—thin gleam, Like light slipping beneath a door.

Sarah M. Lillard
When they say

When they say after every person that dies, they become a star, there must be an empty space in the sky for them when everyone is born; so when we all die we become those spaces; so when a last person remains on our earth, there’s an ageless sky, full of stars — blinding — despite all the light that never reaches us

Jayant Kashyap

Supernova

O Betelgeuse, I look at your shoulder in the sky, still fastening Orion’s body like a red, celestial gauze when all you really want is to burst into light – I, too, carry this desire for annihilation, for being jettisoned from the atmosphere, like a flawed lodestar – just a burning, wild blaze who explodes before she is cast forcibly like Cassiopeia into starlight.

Kunjana Parashar

Dark Matter

How do we see the unseen? A ghostly presence felt, this dark path between stars.

The Milky Way, a pearly spiral, and we with limited vision, star-created, star-drawn, unable to see the tenebrous beauty of bent light.

Merril D. Smith

Spider’s Web

My buddy’s dressed like Ziggy Stardust

he’s on his knees looking up at the sky pleading for sharper watercolor his body’s full of aurora craters I want to kiss them all I want interstellar us

Our lives are hymns to bold electronics

Justin Karcher

Breath

Exhaled, our breaths are distilled, transmuted, to layers in atmosphere.

Light of stars scattered by dark dust serrated air, makes nights shimmer.

Ranjabali Chaudhuri
Structural Integrity

It starts with a creak, a crack in this man-o’-war’s oaken beams,
then a bang, a big bang,
from somewhere down below,
as suddenly there is no below,
no up, no down,
and we are plunging through nothing
on a doomed trajectory, the panic of being in a punctured tin can.

Mark Gilbert

Dandelion Galaxies

Is this not where we stood watched dandelion galaxies fragment
our skin torn apart
with divided longings?
Your promise;
stars conjure from destruction.
We swallow broken ground forage the sky for resurrection

Kathy Parker

Bella Notte

An ocean of dark enveloping;
L’appel du vide, taking over.
Staring into spheres like the moon,
freckled constellations,
the heat of Mars,
radiating atmospheric in between.

Juliette Sebock

Harvest moon (October 1993)
dad died in autumn
his eyes closed
behind faded curtains hidden from moon and stars outside head thrown back
I howled raw grief
until clouds shifted apart gifted shafts of lunar light his love held back night

Ceinwen Haydon

The Galaxy Trend

Tie-dyed
stars and clouds and moons appear in blacks and purples and blues
and glitters, of course, sparkles to set the mood;
deep space brought earth-bound in shirts and slimes and hair and shoes in galaxy-coloured trendy hues.

Juliette Sebock
Microcosm

Night slews in, slowdark inks the pond
Hine-nui-te-pō’s fingers stir giddy a constellation of gentled waterbeetles

In twitching orbit, podfoil bodies surf swells of silver equations, arrayed antennae quivering for any edges to the endless

Even the wingless will fling themselves at new suns jetting vapour at dawn
to escape this steady drowning

Southern Crossing

To our bones, we’re sailors your castoff ancestors and mine greedy for the long horizons

Black water licks the hull, paua-tongue velvet Sacks fill, the shucking knife flashes an arc, the sky stabbed to welling jewels of broken nacre

And up there, the crux of it all, those four bullroaring stars
Haere mai, their pointer song a hook tugging south the waka, laden with stories of silver fish, and earth so rich for growing

Ankh Spice
At the Heart of the Milky Way

Bubblegum and blue ink sky over a barrelling midnight train.

Awake and lonely in the carriage like a galaxy eating her own organs spitting out stars like tobacco.
We mix rum and raspberries to feel like dust. An anchor-less planet speeding this way. Its shadow passes over your face, taking me with it.

Ursa

What’s the sparkling price of lust?
The sky’s wife turns a woman to a brown bear.
The son is a feather-tailed arrow,
a taut silver bow.
It is an easy story.
The sky pulls families from the earth.
Into himself.
As girls, we realise the cost:
all the stars are graves.

Kandace Siobhan Walker

[...] Life learns its quiet phases.
We draw close and then, it seems,
with no power of our own pull apart. Find new orbits.
[...]

Paul Deaton

[...] Walking home, over Gaol Ferry Bridge, after some party drinks, Orion splayed above St Paul’s Church like a fat limbed gingerbread man, and that star, cold as quartz, your watchful astronomy tells you isn’t a star but giant Jupiter, up there,
the same size as the stone in your shoe.

Back of the Net

Palpable thickness
of stars / Pencil-thin scratch of plane strikes through surface-sand sky / The line reveals itself to be a circle on its side. Big moon, says the eye

Comets dim their lights upon landing,
take off trailing life, commiserate the orbit that can’t see past the prize

Lydia Unsworth

My Son’s Space

My son wants to find a planet hotter than ours, but cooling rapidly.
We will trade places with the goldilocks aliens so each of us finds a just-right home.

This is how he solves problems—missile attacks,
the climate crisis, poverty. He invents solutions, builds models, gives all the energy and love
he has to liquid possibilities of rescue.

Hearing I have lymphoma doesn’t dissolve his glittering resolve. He sits, quiet. Then he says, I will find a cure.

Michael Dickel

Defiance.

I'll tear a sheet of starlight for your blanket,
a burnished cloth of gold to ward off fears,
there beneath bright Apollo, you'll greet the morning,
curled inside your mother's wounded feet,
eyes defiant shimmering flakes of jet,
burn away the fog of my appearance,
from deep within that ragged bundle,
a jolting tearful journey in the moonlight,
brought you here as if cast from heavens net.

Ruairí de Barra Tethered

Inhale
Open the airlock,
float into black.
Distant stars cold and glittering.

Exhale
Below dingy white boots
the globe glows blue marbled with white clouds

Inhale

Horsehead Nebula

Within Orion’s belt,
the black stallion rears up to meet a cloud of scarlet flame before he bolts,
galloping between dying supergiants.

Karen Steiger

Theory

Fact gravitationally glanced back.
Lens, lights, ballerinas in time’s performance.

Backdrop of cosmic waves,
in endless expansion,
pulses raised,
the audience edge seats,
seeking, listening,
beating hearts,
and insight, silence!

It starts.

Andrew Carnegie

Haiku

Ghost-grey galleon
sails the scattered-star expanse, silent and stately.

Lucy Virgo
we made much of the moon

Wong May said heart draw a circle—more than once I’ve spiraled the sporadic hairs in the center of his chest—soft capital O’s—in the dark of last September, he sent me a photo of his shiny, silver, floating circle—its glow pouring over splintered Texas backcountry branches—my own circle looked dull

& mediocre in comparison (against gaudy big-city lighting)—he said my big tranquil rock was beautiful & I could have wept—it watched in silence as my hand first found his under a picnic table at a bar weathered & dusted in a layer of Crawford silt clay—

Emily Dickinson said To light, and / Then return, round & round in motion—looking into a pint glass brimmed golden, I see a harvest moon

Melanie Kristeen

Space Bound

Saturn’s rings record time—icy grooves sifted and separated shades of gravity in tracks of sand, tan and fossil grey learn its loops, skim their circumference—brush the curves; fall through shattered surfaces rematerialize, reborn to conquer giants

stay light – keep Titan’s opal bead in sight, resist the pull of tidal forces that rip apart orbiting moons

KC Bailey

Mirrorball

Sequined glints waltz infinite interstellar steps through inky ballroom depths.

Laura T. Fyfe
A Henrietta Leavitt

Te dieron un escritorio a treinta centavos la hora y cerraron la puerta.
Y tú, armada de lápiz, lupa y logaritmos, nos abriste los cielos.
Hallaste la inmensidad que Aristarco y Bruno soñaron.
Derribaste los muros de Harvard, las fronteras de Cambridge, las costas de América y el horizonte del mundo.
Arrojaste la mirada humana más allá de las Hespérides, más arriba que el Olimpo, y con la luz de la razón quebraste la antigua esfera celeste.
Nos revelaste que Andrómeda nunca necesitó ser rescatada, más lejos que el Pegaso, donde el monstruo del mar no puede alcanzarla.

To Henrietta Leavitt

They gave you a desk at thirty cents an hour and closed the door.
And you, armed with pencil, loupe and logarithms, opened the heavens to us.
You found the immensity Aristarchus and Bruno dreamed of.
You tore down the walls of Harvard, the borders of Cambridge, the coasts of America and the horizon of the world.
You cast the human gaze beyond the Hesperides, above Olympus, and with the light of reason shattered the old celestial sphere.
You revealed to us that Andromeda never needed to be rescued,
for she’s billions of times farther than Perseus, much farther than Pegasus, where the sea monster can never reach her.

Arturo Serrano

Fis

Feadhain aisteach cam
Sé troigh ar leithead
Ina sheasamh idir beirt ballaí briste
Chúidithe le caonach Sna talaimh leathan Caisleáin Biorra.
Leacht i gcuimhne brionglóid,
Leacht i gcuimhne baois,
Gur thógadh an teileascóp is mó sa domhan
Ar an fáiche faoi fhéar droimneach seo
Faoi braillín liath scamail.

Translation:

Vision
A strange, crooked pipe
Six feet wide
Standing between two broken walls Covered in moss
In the grounds of Birr Castle
A monument to a dream
A monument to folly
That the world’s largest telescope
Was built on these rolling grassy lawns
Beneath a grey sheet of cloud

Niall Feeney
III - ‘Atomsmasher’

(for Peter Higgs and Dr Lyn Evans)
Neutrino Hunter
I seek the whisper of a rumour
An alteration so subtle
It is almost without meaning.
This dark power
Binder of galaxy, cosmos.
Its presence as absence revealed
A breath exhaled, a shadow left behind.

David Fry

Deep Space
What lives beyond stars where darkness across the void swallows light?

Planets and comets collide
A silence, a violence, unseen

Paul Kohn

Extravasation
Breathless, in the solar plexus of a black hole, two neutron stars spin in this pulsar heart;
drawing down our horizon of light-time unto the edge of our insignificance, minuscule, and so very, very dark.
Spiralling in this milky backwater,
we may yet find consolation,
even in the profound silence,
of the big bang.

James Young

Higgs boson

FIRED >

veil>vortex>sphere>spin>speed wave>web>weave>cause fury>force
ghost-god
G A S P

(shroud source)

FIRED >

Matthew M C Smith

Quantum
Toss a dart at an orbital and only a small fraction of the time will you pin an electron corner a quark
this is what our bodies are like, often found in the same rooms
but so unlikely to collide

Joey Lew
The Atomsouser

(After a Presentation by Dr Lyn Evans at the Science Café, Dylan Thomas Centre, Swansea, September 2012).

1.

Soon it’s all going to be science fiction. Let me tell you how. Tomorrow will be today. And Lyn Evans will find himself in the next dimension as easily as leaving a room. Yes, I can promise you that: science fiction. Lyn Evans smashing the atoms, so we can all find out…

2.

The garden too quiet. That type of quiet when a sparrowhawk comes down. There it is, its breast barred. Sandstone and quartz. Not a voice, not a vowel. But the type of quiet when a sparrowhawk comes down. The baleful bird.

3.

Aubergine flower purple to black from a pavement crack as the earth moves. Nightflower, I’d say, black stem and black sap. A judge’s black cap

4.

Lyn Evans told us dark energy fills space. And Lyn Evans is home after annihilating atoms in Switzerland. I loved Lyn Evans’s cyclonic mind. But he failed to make his computer work. So why doesn’t he turn back time?, a voice behind me asked.

5.

And I thought of the anti-orchid, anti-purple out of anti-earth, the anti God who put the particles together and apart. Maybe it doesn’t work like that. And maybe it does.

6.

Salute Lyn Evans, thunderbolt on his costume. Yes, Lyn the atom smasher, who could not make his computer work. But one day he will turn back time… The software should be the same. And if time is many mansions maybe that’s why Lyn Evans keeps leaving the room…

Robert Minhinnick
‘There are no comments by Mr. Armstrong. He lives reclusively in Ohio and does not attend conferences, reunions, celebrations, parades, anniversaries, press events. He does not answer mail from strangers, answer the telephone, open the door. He was however, many years ago, asked how he felt knowing his footprints might remain undisturbed on the lunar surface for centuries. ‘I hope somebody goes up there some day,’ he said, ‘and cleans them up.’” – Mary Ruefle

the breakaway effect

when pilot whales lay down on a beach, their lungs collapse under the weight—flesh & fat crush intestines, liver—heat exhausted , mouths agape. animals kill themselves without comment. a loss of oxygen can cause one last grand erection—a euphoria of sorts—coming back to a spacecraft is difficult for some astronauts, separated from the cosmos (from everything) by almost nothing, blood suspended at their feet. outside of gravity, organs float in the body. whales are still on a beach—still heavy—the gravitas of gravity, like rapture of the deep , effects us profoundly. a stag, a cliff & a leap. isn’t it vulgar? isn’t it grand? —life, I mean, release

Melanie Kristeen

Mir Falls
(3644)

Gold against black above blue.
Your sails carried us.
A decade of life where none should be.
Knowledge and hope burning the sky.

Voyager 1
(Valentine’s Day, 1990)

The last look a shutters click our system from the edge. One pale blue dot in a family portrait the mark of man unseen. Travelling on beyond dark borders, to continue our story, our search.

Richard Waring
Epilogue - ‘remnant fragments’ faraway stars eat time

star-death spreads through infinite galaxies, dashing toward planets not yet born—drifts of fury and awe travelled.

a saguaro stands high, beckoning suns in the night-sky—their expiry as incandescent explosions:

celestial parade of dead lovers—pinholes outside stygian desert edges.

C. Aloysius Mariotti
Collision

It comes in slivers a plutonian silence before the beginning and after each end

she feels its heartbeat cold and burning stills her breath to listen again

here lies a forgotten stranger words shine on an unmarked grave

a tiny flash a mute impact three hundred thousand miles away brings her squealing to the ground

a dime-sized crater in her side

Scott Elder

Time’s end

A finite infinity expanding ever outwards into itself into nothing, the rush to entropy.

Richard Waring

Part Messages Received from the Missing Mission to the Kuiper Belt:

Message 142326§ǾǿȠȸȨȬ ųȦȬ취endedor

Searching the muted sky while near Djanggawul Fossae on Pluto our equipment picked up two reddish cubewanos slowly crush together … after orbiting around each other for millions of years < > the remnant fragments from this brutal embrace floated away…

Message 5443ʪ˥˦˨˩ ͶͷͼͽΞϡȳϬ킷ղ

On the deathly frozen Haumea we looked up and saw the dim ring circling the egg shaped plutoid < > … the bigger Hi’taka appeared boldly then the gloomy Namaka both moved quickly in the faint day sky which only lasted 4 hours«

Message 5658454 XHTML!!??(Xml

We passed tiny Dysnomia and approached Eris the last known outpost of our Solar System, its surface was rocky white looking back, we saw the Sun which was only a bright point in the distance, « after a few quick orbits we sped away…

Rob McKinnon
entropi (i AJW)

Pe teflid y meini sanctaidd yma
i’r awyr fil o weithiau, ni fyddent yn glanio fel hyn yn ôl.

Mae pob sgwrs mewn carreg yn datod, dynchwel,
y cystrawennau’n cracio,
pobl fel morgrug
yn cario’r geiriau cerfiedig i ffwredd, a’r seiniau pwyth-drwodd o fol y waliau,
i godi rhywbeth newydd;
a fydd hefyd
yn disgyn yn ei dro…

entropy (for AJW)

If these holy stones were thrown up into the air a thousand times, they wouldn’t land back like this.

All conversations in stone crumble, collapse,
the syntaxes snap,
for ant-like people
to carry away the carved words,
and the tie-stoned sounds from the walls’ belly,
to build something new;
which will itself
fall in turn …

(translation by Geraint Lovgreen)

Ifor ap Glyn, National Poet of Wales

“Da Bo Chi” - “goodbye”
List of Contributors

David Amwn is the author of eleven collections of poetry, the most recent being Red Bank (2018). He is a winner of the Cardiff International Prize for Poetry. He has written the Gothic trilogy of critical studies: Gothic Machine (2011), Sexuality and the Gothic Magic Lantern (2014) and Gothic Effigy (2018). An exhibition of his poetry appeared with the calligraphy of Thomas Ingamire at the Book Club of California in San Francisco in 2016 and the American film-maker, Howard Munson, has recently made videos of his work. His poetry is included in The Edge of Necessity, An Anthology of Welsh Innovative Poetry 1966-2018 (2019).

Rosemary Appleton has had her poems published in Molecia, The Fenland Reed, Spontaneity and The Willington Street Review. She writes in snatched, coffee-fuelled moments in the wilds of East Anglia. tweeting @BluestockingBks

KC Bailey is a poet from Northamptonshire, studying towards an MA in Creative Writing. When not writing, reading or walking her dog, she practices Tai Chi and drinks Earl Grey tea, though hasn’t yet mastered the art of doing both at the same time. On Twitter @kcbayleyswriter.

Phil Berry’s poems have appeared or are forthcoming in Lament Dances, Picaroon, Little Dog Poetry, Black Bough, and The Healing Maze. He also writes short fiction, CNF and a medical blog. His writing can be explored at www.philberrycreative.wordpress.com or @philaberry.

Kathryn Bevis is an emerging poet and educator. Founder of The Writing School, she hosts an ACE-funded Poetry for Wellbeing project for service users of Mind. In 2019, Kathryn has won the Poets and Players competition, come third in the Welshpool Poetry Festival Competition, and been runner up in the Out-Spoken Prize for Poetry.

Penny Blackburn lives in the North East of England and writes poetry and short fiction. Her online publication includes pieces in Writers’ Cafe, Bangor Literary Journal and Marston Poetry Village and she has appeared in print anthologies by Batley Poets and Paper Swans Press.

Tamsin Blaxter is a poet and historical linguist based in Cambridge. She was born in a house on the brow of a hill from which balloons could often be seen. She never knows what to write in these things. @what_really_no / www.icge.co.uk.

Frances Boyle is a Canadian writer, and the author of two books of poetry (one in 2014, one due in fall 2019), a novella (2018) and a short story collection to be published in 2020. She lives in Ottawa, and her poems and short fiction appear in print and online magazines throughout Canada and the U.S. This is her first U.K. publication.

Andrew Carnegie is an adventurer, entrepreneur and Wiltshire based poet, with a national bravery award. He sailed around the UK in 2018 pursuing the stories of the Celtic Saints and then carried a 200ft cross from Malmesbury, 200 miles North to York, during Lent 2019. He’s appeared in the Nation-wide series of ITV adverts and also BBC Radio 4. He is in the unusual position of having written poetry for commercial use without having published his own anthology, so far.

Angela T. Carr is a poet living in Dublin. Winner of the 2018 Laureate’s Prize, selected by Carol Ann Duffy, her work has been placed or shortlisted in over 40 national and international literary competitions and published in Ireland, the UK and US. More at www.adreamingskin.com.

Rachel Carney has had poems published in several magazines and journals including The New Welsh Review, Ink Sweat and Tears, and The Wales Haiku Journal. She is a book blogger at www.createdtoread.com and has also written articles and reviews for magazines and websites: www.createdtoread.com @createdtoread www.facebook.com/createdtoread

Anne Casey Originally from the west of Ireland, Anne Casey is a Sydney-based writer and poet. Author of where the lost things go (Salmon Poetry 2017, 2nd ed 2018), her second poetry collection, out of emptied cups, was published by Salmon in June 2019. Anne’s writing and poetry are widely published internationally and rank in The Irish Times Most-Read. She has won/shortlisted for poetry awards in Ireland, Northern Ireland, the USA, the UK, Canada and Australia, and is Senior Poetry Editor of two literary journals.

Julian Cason has two jobs. He works both as a lawyer and as a poet. Born and raised in Cardiff. Most recently published in Envoi, Pulp Poets Press, Nine Muses and The Down TREATER.

Ranjabali Chaudhuri is a lawyer and a published poet. At the moment she is packing her boxes to move from Amsterdam to London, but some day she hopes to live in a cottage in the Nilgiris. Her Twitter handle is @Ranjabali.

Dom Conlon is a poet and author. His first collection, Astro Poetica, was praised by Nicola Davies as being ‘Insightful, thought-provoking and fun’. His second collection, This Rock That Rock is being released by Trinika in Spring 2020. He tweets @dom_conlon.

Lilia Cosavalente is a California-grown, Arizona-based writer who is just starting to put her own work out there. Film grad and entertainment industry employee, she enjoys using words and music to inspire and entertain people. She tweets about writing, work, and anime on her Twitter: @scriptosoprano.

Rob Cullen grew up in the Rhondda, attended Bristol, Cardiff, Brighton Art Schools - lived in New York & Brighton. Rob’s collection Uncertain Times was published in 2016. He’s been published in I AM NOT A SILENT POET, The Begin, The Learned Pig, Red Poets issues 17 & 18. Rob has written a crime novel and is writing his second.
Paul Deaton was born in London and raised in Wales. He was runner-up in the Arvon International Poetry Competition 2010 and winner of the SaveAs Writers International Poetry Prize 2016. His work appears regularly in The Spectator, is included in York Notes for GCSE study guides and is featured in various magazines and anthologies including PN Review, The London Magazine, The Dark Horse. A novel started on his MLitt at Glasgow University was recently finished. A Watchful Astraluf (Seren) is his debut collection, and a Poetry Book Society Recommendation

Ruarí de Barra is from Co. Mayo and now resides in Co. Cork. He is a sailor, an award-winning military journalist, and a poet. His creative work has featured with Taiméin, A New Ulster, Live Encounters, The Banger Literary Journal, and it can all be read on www.paperneverfusedink.com

Sarah Doyle won the WoLF poetry competition and Brexit in Poetry 2019, was runner-up in the Kears-Shelley Poetry Prize 2019, and was highly commended in the Forward Prizes 2018. She is currently researching a PhD in meteorological poetry at Birmingham City University.

Mari Ellis Dunning is an award-winning Welsh writer of poetry, short stories and children’s books. Her debut children’s book was launched at the Abergevenny Writing Festival in 2016 and her debut poetry collection, Salacia, was nominated for the Wales Book of the Year Award in 2019. Mari has an MA in Creative Writing from Aberystwyth University. The coast is hugely important to her writing and wellbeing. She tweets at @mariicells.

Nidhi Zak/Aria Eipe is a poet, pacifist and fabulist. She has recently presented her work at the Cork International Poetry Festival 2019. An MFA candidate at University College Dublin, where she is working on her debut collection.

Scott Elder lives in France. His poems have appeared or are forthcoming in numerous magazines including Southword, The New Welsh Reader, The Rainth, and The Muth. A pamphlet ‘Breaking Away’ was published by Poetry Salzburg and his debut collection Part of the Dark by Dopsey & Windle.

Glyn Edwards - a teacher in North Wales and an MA student at Manchester Metropolitan University. His debut collection of poetry Vertebrae was published by The Lonely Press in July.

Pat Edwards—a writer, workshop facilitator, reviewer and general poetry activist. Her work has appeared in Prols, Magma, Ink. Sweat & Tears and others. Pat hosts Verbatim monthly poetry open mic nights and curates Welshpool Poetry Festival in Mid Wales.

Niall Feeney is equally passionate about the inspirational nature of space exploration and the community building that goes into keeping minority languages alive. He is a keen amateur astronomer who practices his Irish by tweeting about current affairs and science as @irokie

Ann-Marie Foster is a journalist and newsreader for the BBC in Belfast. It’s a great job but I can’t use adjectives. Or adverbs. Or metaphors. You get the picture. @AnnMarieCFoster

David Fry worked in social work for over thirty years and has recently started writing. He is entirely self-taught and whilst he respects rhyme and rhythm his first love is creating images through the written word. @thnagrg

Antonio Fusco is an Irish-born writer living in Paris. He has a background in fine art and philosophy and his poetry has been published in Sons and Daughters journal @SostieneFusco

Laura T. Fyfe lives in Stirling and suffers from a chronic low boredom threshold. She facilitates writing workshops and communities, writes poetry, fiction and non-fiction. Her books Wilspring and Magpie Mind help writers live more creative lives. Twitter: @FigmentLauree Instagram: @lauraratyfe

Mark Gilbert writes short prose and poetry and has recently been published in Sonic Boom, Human/Kind, Wales Haiku Journal and Weird Labourium. He also does the occasional spoken word event. @MarkgZero

Kathy Gee’s career was in heritage. Her poetry collection was published by V. Press http://vypresspoetry.blogspot.co.uk/p/book-of-bones.html and she wrote the spoken word elements for http://suiteforthefallensoldier.co.uk/. Her small collection of duologues – Checkout, set in a corner shop – was published in March 2019. http://vypresspoetry.blogspot.com/p/bookshop.html

Chloe Gorman is a copywriter, aspiring poet & author. Her poetry and fiction leans towards romantic, dark and gothic themes. She has an MA in Professional Writing from Falmouth University for which she received a distinction. She has poems being published soon in Ravens in the Attic, Moonshick, Three Dots From a Cauldron, Black Bough Issue 1 & Fevers of the Mind.

Angela Graham is a film-maker (BAFTA, Foreign-language Oscar entrant). Since 2018 her poetry has appeared in The North, Infinities Ruin, The Honest Ulitman, The Ogham Stone 2019, The Banger Literary Journal and The Open Ear. An award-winning short story writer, she was nominated by Crannog for the Pushcart Prize 2019 and her collection, set in Wales, Ireland and Italy, A City Burning, is due from Seren next year. She is completing a novel on the politics of language, with the support of an award from the Arts Council of Northern Ireland. @angelagraham8 http://angelagraham.org/2018/10/my-work-in-2018/

Robert Hamilton is a poet and English professor living in Texas. His first chapbook, Heart Trouble, was published by Ghost City Press in 2018. Recent poems appear in Poist and The Fictional Cafe. He tweets at @ragandboshop.

Natalie Ann Holborow is a Swansea-born writer of poetry and fiction. In 2015, she won both the Terry Hetherington Award and Robin Reeves Prize, and was this year commended for the Hippocrates Prize for Poetry and Medicine. Her debut collection, And Suddenly You Find Yourself, was listed as one of Wales Art’s Reviews Best Books of 2017. She is currently finishing off her second collection, Small.

Wendy Holborow is a prize winning poet and fiction writer, published internationally. After the Silent Phone Call (Poetry Salzburg 2015). An Italian Afternoon (Indigo Dreams 2017 a Poetry Book Society recommendation), and Janky Tsku Tsku (The High Window Press 2018) https://www.wendyholborow.org.uk

Kathryn Hope is a retired infants teacher from Swansea who has just started writing poetry and is unpublished. She enjoys gardening, her family and her two dogs Bunty and Mimi. Kath’s poem in Issue 2 is a feminist mythological & futuristic, cosmic poem.
Kyla Houbolt has been writing for years and only recently began sending out work. She has enjoyed writing micropoems this year which have appeared in Nightingale & Sparrow, Detroit Online, as well as Black Bough Poetry’s inaugural issue. Other work in Kissing Dynamite special zine Hand to Mouth, and forthcoming in several journals including Barren Magazine and Juke Joint. Follow her on Twitter @luaz_poet. Kyla lives and writes in Gastonia, NC, USA.

Rae Howells is a Swansea poet and journalist. She has had poems published in Magna, The Rialto, Envoi, New Welsh Review, Marble, Poetry Ireland, The Cardiff Review and others, and has won both the Welsh International and Rialto Nature and Place poetry competitions.

Caroline Johnstone grew up in Northern Ireland but now lives in Ayrshire where she dares people to be happier all around the world. An author and a storyteller poet, she’s been published in the US, UK and Ireland. She’s a member of the Scottish Poetry Library’s Advisory Board, is the social media manager for the Federation of Writer’s (Scotland) and is a member and supporter of Women Aloud NI, Scottish Pen and the Association of Scottish Artists for Peace.

Jayant Kashyap is a Pushcart Prize-nominee, the co-founding editor of Bold + Italic, and a food blogger, has his debut chapbook, Survival, coming soon from Clare Songbird Publishing House, NY.

Elizabeth Kemball is from Stoke-on-Trent and writes both poetry and prose. She graduated last year from the University of Warwick with a degree in English Literature and Creative writing. Her poems often centre around nature, bodies and religion. Elizabeth shocked with a degree in English Literature and Creative writing. Her poems and prose. She graduated last year from the University of Warwick

Richard LeDue was born in Sydney, Nova Scotia. He currently lives in Norway House, Manitoba. His work has been published in the Tower Poetry Society, in The Cardiff Review, The Rialto, Envoi, New Welsh Review, Marble, Poetry Ireland, The Cardiff Review and others, and has won both the Welsh International and Rialto Nature and Place poetry competitions.

Joey Lew holds an MFA from UNC-Greensboro and is currently a medical student at UCSF. Her interviews and reviews have been published in D dna, Michigan Quarterly Review Online, and Tapelo Quarterly, and her poetry can be seen in Gravel.

Sarah M. Lillard is a writer living in Virginia. She writes poetry and lyric essays on a variety of subjects that include birds, motherhood, and living with chronic illness. She has work forthcoming in the summer 2019 issue of The Hellebore.

C. Aloysius Mariotti was born in Pennsylvania and raised in Arizona. He studied creative writing at the University of Arizona in Tucson, where he also listened to a lot of Rush, Radiohead, and PJ Harvey. He resides in Massachusetts with his wife Kristen and crazy Westie Bella Francine.

Tracy Martinez—artist, craftperson and photographer with BA(Hons) in Fine Art. Also writes poetry and is working on a fantasy novel. Originally from Swansea, Tracy now lives in Llanelli, overlooking the wetlands and estuary which inspires her work. Facebook.com/TracyCableArt. Facebook.com/TangerineCloudStudios

Catherine McCabe is a Belfast-based Ghostwriter, Poet and Blogger, with work published in A New Ulster (2018) and on Spillwords (2019).

Joanne McCarthy is a poet and spoken word artist from Waterford, Ireland. She holds a M.Phil in Social and Cultural Geography and writes about people and place in both English and Irish. Her videopoem ‘Shoulder’ will be screened as part of Modwords Festival 2019.

Robert Minhinnick is a Welsh poet, novelist,短 story writer and essayist. He has won the Forward Prize twice, along with Wales Book of the Year a record three times – most recently for his poetry collection, Diary of the Last Man (Carcanet, 2017). Diary of the Last Man was also shortlisted for the T.S. Eliot Prize and has been made into a film, directed by Eamon Bourke. He is former editor of Poetry Wales and co-founder of Friends of the Earth Cymru and Sustainable Wales

Joanne McCarthy is a poet and spoken word artist from Waterford, Ireland. She holds a M.Phil in Social and Cultural Geography and writes about people and place in both English and Irish. Her videopoem ‘Shoulder’ will be screened as part of Modwords Festival 2019.

Rob McKinnon lives in the Adelaide Hills, South Australia. His poetry has previously been published in Disident Voice, Tuck Magazine and InDaily.

John McLachlan is 36 and has written for as long as he could form words legibly. He loves to write poetry and to grow and seek inspiration from all things. Whether it is a broken pencil or a smashed snail shell, a perfect rose or a petrol line gleaming multi-colours in the sun, he likes to find a little poetry everywhere.

Paul Kohn is a songwriter and muso from South Australia.

Melanie Kristeen is filled with generalized anxiety. She tentatively thinks of herself as a radical feminist, poet and educator who hails from San Antonio, Texas. She just graduated with an MFA in poetry at Texas State University and is currently the 2019-2020 poet in resident at the Clark house in Smithville, Texas. She has been the recipient of a Damselfly residency in New Mexico and has has been published both online and in print by University of Hall Press. She was also a commissioned, featured artist for Luminaria: San Antonio Arts Festival. Twitter:@TheMelSpell

Michael J. Leach — is a poet, statistician and researcher whose work combines science with art. His poems have appeared in science and literary journals, including The Mathematical Intelligencer and Cardiff Poetry Review. He lives in Bendigo, Australia.

Sarah M. Lillard is a writer living in Virginia. She writes poetry and lyric essays on a variety of subjects that include birds, motherhood, and living with chronic illness. She has work forthcoming in the summer 2019 issue of The Hellebore.

C. Aloysius Mariotti was born in Pennsylvania and raised in Arizona. He studied creative writing at the University of Arizona in Tucson, where he also listened to a lot of Rush, Radiohead, and PJ Harvey. He resides in Massachusetts with his wife Kristen and crazy Westie Bella Francine.

Tracy Martinez—artist, craftperson and photographer with BA(Hons) in Fine Art. Also writes poetry and is working on a fantasy novel. Originally from Swansea, Tracy now lives in Llanelli, overlooking the wetlands and estuary which inspires her work. Facebook.com/TracyCableArt. Facebook.com/TangerineCloudStudios

Catherine McCabe is a Belfast-based Ghostwriter, Poet and Blogger, with work published in A New Ulster (2018) and on Spillwords (2019).

2016, she co-created spy memoir The Black Market Concoctry. Her first poetry collection, Zombie Town deals with themes including climate change, women, mental health, dating and love.

Emilie Moyce—a Cardiff-based poet from central California. She graduated from Kingston University in 2018 with a degree in English Literature and Creative Writing and is currently pursuing an M.A. in Translation Studies from Cardiff University. Her favourite things are words, cats, music, and laundry detergent.

Phil Knight is a poet from Neath. He has been published in Poet y Wales, Earthblog, Planet, Dial 174 and others. In 2015 the Red Poets published his collection You Are Welcome To Wales.

Laurie Koensgen—her poems have appeared in Literary Review of Canada, Arc Poetry Magazine, In/Words, Barren Magazine, Juniper: A Poetry Journal, Kissing Dynamite and elsewhere. She was shortlisted for The Malahat Review’s Far Horizons Award for Poetry 2018. Laurie is a founding member of Ottawa, Canada’s Ruby Tuesdays poetry collective.
Maxine Rose Munro writes in both English and Shetlandic Scots. She is widely published in the UK, in print and online, and her work has been nominated for The Pushcart Prize and Best of the Net. Find her here www.maxinerosemunro.com.

Iona Murphy is an Mst(res) student at The University of St Andrews. When she isn’t doing the Plath and Sexton research she is meant to be doing, she’s writing poems or calling out diet-culture on Twitter. Currently, she is working on her first collection of poems Numbers, throwing down messy ideas for a novel, and of course trying to finish her degree!

Eliot North is a writer, doctor and educator who lives between the North East of the UK and Spain. She writes poetry and prose, has been published widely and is looking to publish her first collection entitled Exitopia, a diary of pregnancy loss in prose and tanka @eliot_north

Kate North—Kate North is from Ynys Mon. Her poems have been published in print and online, and was one of three Guest Readers for Issue 2. Currently, she is working on her first collection of poems—A Poet’s Picnic Anthology

Polly Oliver—hails from Cornwall and lives in Swansea. She’s been writing poetry on and off for years, mainly reading it at open mic nights across the city. Her poems have been published on Spillwords.com and on her blog ‘RocksandBones – Poems from the Celtic Fringes’. She was published in Black Bough Issue 1.

Mark Antony Owen is a syllabic poet from East Hampshire, who writes exclusively in nine original forms—sometimes, with variations. His work centres on that world where the rural bleeds into the suburban: a world he calls ‘subural’. Mark is author of digital-only poetry project Suburria.

Ness Owen is from Ynys Mon. Her poems have been published in journals and anthologies including in Poetry Wales, Red Poets, Malkia, Arachne Press, Mother’s Milk Books and Three Drops Press. Her collection Mamiatih (Mother-tongue) will be published by Arachne Press in August.

Christine Owens has been writing poetry and short stories on and off for over 40 years. Her first honourable mention for poetry was for Ohio Poetry Day as a teenager. She has been recently published in 2017 in A Poet’s Picnic Anthology in Albuquerque, New Mexico as well as receiving a runner up in We Art Friends International Poetry Tournament 2018. Twitter: @PoetrySkep

Daniel Page is a primary school teacher, historian and aspiring poet from Norfolk. His work often takes inspiration from local and national historical events as well as the quirky nature of his day job. @pagesandpages77

Kunjana Parashar is a poet from Mumbai who holds an MA in English Literature from Mumbai University. Her poetry appears or is forthcoming in The Hellbore, The Rumsp (ENOUGH series), Barron Magazine, Riggwelter, Eunoia Review, and elsewhere. You can find her on Twitter @wolfwasp

Kathy Parker is a writer, poet and spoken word performer from South Australia, and author of The Untravelled Heart, her first collection of poetry and prose. Kathy is an op-ed contributor for Network Ten’s news website, 10 Daily, with work also published at S A Life Magazine, Huffington Post, Elephant Journal, The Mighty and The Mind’s Journal.

Alan Parry is a poet, playwright and copywriter from Southport, Merseyside. He is an English Literature graduate and is training to teach high school English this coming year. He cites James Joyce and Alan Bennett as his favourite writers. Twitter: @AlanParry83 Instagram: alphapapa83

Jack Priestnall is a Creative Writing undergrad at Bangor University, he has had work published in The Seventh Quarry Press, Better Than Starbucks, Bottle Rocket Press, Frugpond Journal, Haiku Journal, and The Cherta.

Lee Prosser currently lives in a small village in West Wales and graduated with an MA in Creative Writing at Swansea University in 2018. His work is published in The Gall, Haiku Journal, Three Drops. Lee has been published in both Issues of Black Bough and was one of three Guest Readers for Issue 2.

Lesley Quayle—a widely published, prize-winning poet, a folk/blues singer, flash fiction writer and editor, living in deepest, darkest Dorset. Her latest pamphlet is ‘Black Bicycle’ (4Word, May 2018).

Ian Richardson lives on the East coast of Scotland. In November 2016, he won the Anstruther Writing Award. In September 2015, he was Overall Winner in the Scottish Borders ‘Waverley Lines’ poetry competition. Ian is a regular contributor to the themed ‘Lies, Dreaming spoken word podcast.

Marka Rift—lives in Scotland and writes stories, poems and drama. She has been awarded prizes in poetry and fiction, had short plays performed in Aberdeen and poems shown on Dover Arts Development website and in a Norfolk church. This year, she performed her work at Granite Noir 2019, a festival of crime writing, had a story published in the Arachne Press anthology Noon and another in The Eildon Tree, in an inaugural participation with the Scottish Mental Health Arts Festival.

Ellie Rees gained a PhD in Creative Writing from Swansea University in 2018. She has had her work published both online (Trestle Ties and Cabinet of Heed for example) and on paper (The Lonely Crowd, NI’FR). Her ambition is to publish a collection of poetry. She has the poems, now needs a publisher!

Josh Rees writes poetry and prose. He is a Creative Writing MA student at Swansea University. Aptly enough, he is currently writing a novel called In Search of the Moon.

David Rudd-Mitchell is an occasional poet who has had work published in poetry magazines including BLER, Projectionists Playground, Zen Space and Simply Haiku.

Juliette Sebock is the author of Mistakes Were Made and has had work forthcoming or appearing in a wide variety of publications. She is the founding editor of Nightingale & Sparrow, runs a lifestyle blog, ‘For the Sake of Good Taste’ and is a regular contributor with Marias at Sampaguitas.

Arturo Serrano was born in Colombia and is a creative writing student and professional translator. He has published science fiction in Antimatter Magazine and Azcon, and movie reviews in Hypable. He is currently working on an alternate history novel.

Karla Silverio Sevilla writes from Quezon City, Philippines and is the author of two poetry collections: Metro Manila Mammal (Soma Publishing, 2018) and You (Origami Poems Project, 2017). He has poems published in Philippines Graphic, Estedicia, Ariel Chart, Quatrain.Fish, Peeking Cat Poetry, Milk + Beans, and elsewhere.
Dorian Sinnott is a graduate of Emerson College’s Writing, Literature, and Publishing program, currently residing in the beautiful and historic Kingston, NY with his two cats. He spends his weekends costuming at comic cons up and down the east coast, and herding cats at his local animal shelter. Dorian’s work has appeared in numerous magazines and journals, including Crab Fat Literary Magazine, The Hungry Chimera, and Rigwelter.

Matthew Mc Smith—Matthew Smith published his poetry debut Origin: 21 Poems (Amazon KDP) in 2018. He is from Swansea, Wales, and is the editor of Black Bough Poetry. His poems have been published in online publication ‘Panning for Poems’ and Seventh Quarry Press. He won the R.S. Thomas Prize for Poetry at Gwyl Cybi Festival for his poem ‘Hemphlys Falls’ in 2018. He tweets at @MatthewMCSmith

Merrill D. Smith is an independent scholar with a Ph.D. in American History. Her poetry and stories have appeared recently in Rythline & Bones, Vite Brevi, Streetlight Press, Ghost City, Twist in Time, Majura Heart Review, and Wellington Street Review.

Preston Smith is a senior at Bowling Green State University where he studies English Literature. Preston has interned with Mid-American Review and is currently the managing editor of Prairie Margin. He can be found on Twitter (@psm_writes), tweeting about his cats, Helios and Misty, and his love for fairy tales. He has poems found on Twitter (and Instagram!) @psm_writes, tweeting about his poems. He has just finished studying her undergraduate degree in English Literature. Preston has interned with Mid-American Review and is currently the managing editor of Prairie Margin. He can be found on Twitter (@psm_writes), tweeting about his cats, Helios and Misty, and his love for fairy tales. He has poems found on Twitter (and Instagram!) @psm_writes, tweeting about his poems. He has poems published in “The Castle” (Royal Rain), The Aeronaut, Brave Voices Magazine, and Nightingale & Sparrow and forthcoming in Catfish Creek and Pink Plastic House a tiny journal.

Sasha Smith has just finished studying her undergraduate degree in English and Creative Writing, specialising in poetry. She is currently working on her poetry collection Imitations of Dying which delves into the female psyche and our experiences of the body and pain. She prefers to write using the confessional or lyric style, and also enjoy writing fiction.

Ankh Spice is a poet from New Zealand, obsessed with the sea. He is a survivor of various asylums, including a University where an English degree once happened despite himself. He writes because he has been unsuccessful hiding his lack of skin – so his poetry keeps breathing, even when it hurts, mostly exhaling in natural images.

Leela Soma was born in Madras/Chennai, India and now lives in Glasgow. Her poems and short stories have been published in a number of anthologies, publications. She has published two novels and two collections of poetry. She has served on the Scottish Writer’s Centre Committee and is now in East Dunbartonshire Arts & Culture Committee. Some of her work reflects her dual heritage of India and Scotland. Twitter: @leelasoma Website: leelasoma.wordpress.com

Karen Steiger Karen Steiger is the founder and sole contributor to The Midlife Crisis Poet (www.themidlifecrisispoet.com) and has been published in The Pangolin Review, The Wellesley Street Journal, and Leading Edge Magazine. Her work will appear in future editions of Kaleidotripe and Arsenika. She currently resides in Schaumburg with her husband, Matt, and two retired racing greyhounds, Giza and Horus.

Katherine Stockton is a Welsh playwright and poet, currently studying a MA in Scriptwriting at UEA after graduating from the University of Warwick. She has recently had a play produced in Norwich’s historic Maddermaker Theatre and looks forward to being a published poet in the upcoming East Anglian anthology Like The Sea I Think. Katie has appeared in both Issues of Black Bough and was one of three Guest Readers for Issue 2.

Jess Thayil is working to complete a first collection of poems. Her poetry has featured in Magma Poetry, The Stinging Fly, Ink Sweat & Tears, Black Bough Poetry, AbstractMagazineTV, Potomac Review and Whale Road Review.

Elise Triplett is a writer working from Bowling Green, Ohio working on getting their first publication. They have an upcoming internship with Mid American Review. They don’t enjoy the beach, but do like going to cat cafes.

Lynn Valentine writes between dog walks on the Black Isle in the Scottish Highlands. Her work has appeared in anthologies and online in places such as the Scottish Poetry Library blog and Ink, Sweat and Tears. She is a previous winner of the Glasgow Women’s Library ‘Dragon’s Pen’ award and has been placed in other competitions.

Luci Virgo—Lives Down Under, by the Blue Lake. Identifies as female, & is currently journeying to meet herself.

Kandace Siobhan Walker is a writer and visual artist. Her short film Last Days of the Girl’s Kingdom, produced in collaboration with the ICA and DAZED, was aired on Channel 4’s Random Acts. Her writing has appeared in Quirk, The Good Journal and Oceanid. She lives in Wales.

Laura Wainwright was born in Cardiff and lives in Newport, south Wales. She is author of a book of literary criticism, New Territories in Modernist Anglophone Welsh Writing 1939-1945 (University of Wales Press, 2018). She was shortlisted in the Bridport Prize poetry competition in 2013. Her poetry is published or forthcoming in Black Bough Poetry, Wales Haiku Journal, Pearson Poetry and Burning House Press. She is guest editor for Black Bough issue 2. Twitter: @wainwrightlj

Richard Waring—Richard has lived in Belfast all his life. He loves his city and like many who live there shows that love by constantly complaining about it. His first poem To Lie On White On Green is published in the 2019 CAP anthology Final.

K Weber has recent written work in Pink Plastic House and Monoir Mixtapes. K's photography is featured in Barren Magazine. Her 4 self-published poetry books are free in PDF & audio formats. These and her full writing credits available at http://kweberandherwords.wordpress.com

Lucy Whitehead writes haiku and poetry. Her haiku have been published in various international journals and anthologies, including Akuin Quarterly, Bêthe Spirit, Frogpond, budgenom, Modern Haiku, Otata, The Heron’s Nest, tinywords, Under the Basho, and a hole in the light The Red Moon Anthology of English-Language Haiku 2018. Her poetry has appeared in Barren Magazine, Burning House Press, Twist in Time Literary Magazine, and Munkyshock Magazine. Her Twitter handle is @blueirispoetry.

Glen Wilson lives in Portadown. He has been widely published having work in The Honest Ulsterman, Isota, The Paperclip, amongst others. He won the Seamus Heaney Award for New Writing in 2017, the Jonathan Swift Creative Writing Award in 2018 and The Trim Poetry competition in 2019. His first collection of poetry An Experience on the Tongue with Duir Press is out now. https://glenwilsonglittery.wordpress.com/ Twitter @glenhswilson https://www.doirepress.com/bookstore/poetry/

Robin Wright lives in Southern Indiana. Her work has appeared in Panoply, Spank the Carp, Rue Scribe, Terror House Magazine, and others. Two of her poems were published in The University of Southern Indiana’s 50th anniversary anthology, Time Present, Time Past. In 2018 Panoply nominated one of her poems for a Pushcart Prize.

James Young is a poet living in The Mumbles, Wales. He does most of his writing in his beach hut at Rotershade Bay. The sea his inspiration.

Tim Youngs is the author of the pamphlet, Touching Distance (Five Leaves, 2017) and co-editor with Sarah Jackson of the anthology, In Transit: Poems of Travel (The Emma Press, 2018). His poems have appeared in several print and online magazines.